

WASHINGTON STAR

SERVICE SCENE

Won't Lose Base, Burke Explains

By RUTH DEAN
Star Staff Writer

"We're not going to give it up" is the way Admiral Arleigh Burke flatly put it last night when asked if he thought the big United States naval base at Guantanamo might be next on the list of appropriated United States property in Cuba.

The Chief of Naval Operations calmly explained that in the first place "the Cubans can't take it" because the United States holds the naval base by treaty. For the treaty to become ineffective "it would have to be abrogated by both countries," he further explained. "And we're not going to give it up," he added without elaboration except to point out that property held by treaty has a different status from property held through private investment.

Admiral and Mrs. Burke were among the guests attending the early evening reception given by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Hans Georg von Tempelhoff in honor of the general's visiting countryman, Gen. Hans Speidel, commander of NATO Allied Land Forces, Central Europe.

The party at the Westchester Apartments climaxed Gen. Speidel's four-day visit to the Capital as the guest of and as one of the principal speakers at the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army which met here earlier this week.

Lemnitzer Host

Immediately following the reception, Gen. Speidel, with his host and other members of the German delegation which Gen. von Tempelhoff heads to the Military Committee of the NATO Standing Group, went on to Fort Myer. There, they attended a stag dinner given in Gen. Speidel's honor by Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Army Chief of Staff.

At the reception, Gen. Speidel was being complimented on the fluency of his English in his AUSA address by his old friend, Gen. Alfred Gruenther, president of the American National Red Cross and former NATO chief in Europe.

A few minutes, Gen. and Mrs. Gruenther were warmly greeting Gen. and Mrs. Nathan Twining, for whom this was her first party appearance since she left the hospital in mid-July, she said. Kidding, Gen. Gruenther told Mrs. Twining that her husband had "stolen the spotlight for the day" with his surprise announcement of his intention to retire as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

To Stay in Washington

Gen. Twining said "no date" had been set for his retirement, that his visit to the White House yesterday was just to tell the President of his "intention to retire." His plans when he does retire? "We'll stay right here in Washington. It's a nice place to live," he added with a quiet smile.

The Twinings and the Gruenthers were on their way to a dinner given by Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Ira Eaker for their house guests, former Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett.

Reminiscing about their vacation in their native Pacific Northwest were the Vice Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. James S. Russell. The Russells were reunited with their son and his family in Takoma, Wash. While they were out there, they added to some property they have near American Lake, decided to build a house and hired an architect. "I don't know how successful it's going to be building a house 3,000 miles away," laughed Dorothy Russell.

Old House

Also building their dreams around a house in the country are former Army Intelligence Chief and Mrs. Robert A. Schow. Mrs. Schow said that in addition to the two pieces of property they have in Fauquier County down in Virginia's hunt country they've recently bought some land in Culpeper County "that has a house on it at last," she exclaimed. "It's old and we'll have to make renovations," she said, "but it'll be a nice place for weekends when Gen. Schow wants to go hunting or fishing."

Also at the party were NATO military representatives from other countries, including Italy's Lt. Gen. Umberto de Martino, one-time holder of the fencing championship for the United States; France's Gen. Andre Beaufre, the United Kingdom's Air Chief Marshal Sir

George H. Mills and Lt. Gen. Mills, Canada's Air Vice Marshal and Mrs. Max M. Hendrick, and the United States' Gen. and Mrs. Clark L. Ruffner.

Deputy CIA director and Mrs. Charles P. Cabell were also there, talking with former Army Chief of Staff J. Lawton Collins, and Mrs. Collins, Lt. Gen. and Mrs. R. W. Colglazier, Jr., Army foreign liaison officer Lt. Col. "Bill" Farquhar, and officials of the AUSA and their wives.

Admiral Arleigh Burke (right), Chief of Naval Operations, emphasizes a point while talking with Gen. Hans Speidel, commander, Allied Land Forces, Central Europe, NATO, as Brig. Gen. Hans-Georg von Tempelhoff (center), listens attentively. Gen. Speidel, here to address the Association of the United States Army convention, was guest of honor at a cocktail party last night given by Gen. and Mrs. von Tempelhoff at the Westchester.—Star Staff Photo by Rosemary.

AUG 12 1960

STAR

Circ.: e. 258,434
S. 291,348

Front Edit Other
Page Page Page

Date: AUG 12 1960

SERVICE SCENE

Won't Lose Base, Burke Explains

By RUTH DEAN
Star Staff Writer

We're not going to give it up, is the way Admiral Arleigh Burke flatly put it last night when asked if he thought the big United States naval base at Guantanamo might be next on the list of appropriated United States property in Cuba.

The Chief of Naval Operations calmly explained that in the first place, "the Cubans can't take it" because the United States holds the naval base by treaty. For the treaty to become ineffective "it would have to be abrogated by both countries," he further explained. "And we're not going to give it up," he added without elaboration except to point out that property held by treaty has a different status from property held through private investment.

Admiral and Mrs. Burke were among the guests attending the early evening reception given by Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Hans-Georg von Tempelhoff in honor of the general's visiting countryman, Gen. Hans Speidel, commander of NATO Allied Land Forces, Central Europe.

The party at the Westchester Apartments climaxed Gen. Speidel's four-day visit to the Capital as the guest of and as one of the principal speakers at the annual meeting of the Association of the United States Army, which met here earlier this week.

Lemnitzer Host

Immediately following the reception, Gen. Speidel, with his host and other members of the German delegation which Gen. von Tempelhoff heads to the Military Committee of the NATO Standing Group, went on to Fort Myer. There, they attended a stag dinner given in Gen. Speidel's honor by Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Army Chief of Staff.

At the reception, Gen. Speidel was being complimented on the fluency of his English in his AUSA address by his old friend, Gen. Alfred Gruenther, president of the American National Red Cross and former NATO chief in Europe.

In a few minutes, Gen. and Mrs. Gruenther were warmly greeting Gen. and Mrs. Nathan Twining, for whom this was her first party appearance since she left the hospital in mid-July, she said. Kiddingly, Gen. Gruenther told Mrs. Twining that her husband had "stolen the spotlight for the day" with his surprise announcement of his intention to retire as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

To Stay in Washington

Gen. Twining said "no date" had been set for his retirement, that his visit to the White House yesterday was just to tell the President of his "intention to retire." His plans when he does retire? "We'll stay right here in Washington. It's a nice place to live," he added with a quiet smile.

The Twinings and the Gruenthers were on their way to a dinner given by Lt. Gen. and Mrs. Ira Eaker for their house guests, former Secretary of Defense and Mrs. Robert A. Lovett.

Reminiscing about their vacation in their native Pacific Northwest were the Vice Chief of Naval Operations and Mrs. James S. Russell. The Russells were reunited with their son and his family in Takoma, Wash. While they were out there, they added to some property they have near American Lake, decided to build a house and hired an architect. "I don't know how successful it's going to be building a house 3,000 miles away," laughed Dorothy Russell.

Old House

Also building their dreams around a house in the country are former Army Intelligence Chief and Mrs. Robert A. Schow. Mrs. Schow said that in addition to the two pieces of property they have in Fauquier County down in Virginia's hunt country they've recently bought some land in Culpeper County "that has a house on it at last," she exclaimed. "It's old and we'll have to make renovations," she said, "but it'll be a nice place for weekends when Gen. Schow wants to go hunting or fishing."

Also at the party were NATO military representatives from other countries, including Italy's Lt. Gen. Umberto de Martino, one-time holder of the fencing championship for the United States; France's Gen. Andre Beaufre, the United Kingdom's Air Chief Marshal Sir

George H. Mills and Lady Mills, Canada's Air Vice Marshal and Mrs. Max M. Hendrick, and the United States' Gen. and Mrs. Clark L. Ruffner.

Deputy CIA director and Mrs. Charles P. Cabell were also there, talking with former Army Chief of Staff J. Lawton Collins, and Mrs. Collins, Lt. Gen. and Mrs. R. W. Colglazier, jr., Army foreign liaison officer Lt. Col. "Bill" Farquhar, and officials of the AUSA and their wives.

STAT

Admiral Arleigh Burke (right) / Chief of Naval Operations, emphasizes a point while talking with Gen. Hans Speidel, commander, Allied Land Forces, Central Europe, NATO, as Brig. Gen. Hans-Georg von Tempelhoff (center) listens attentively. Gen. Speidel, here to address the Association of the United States Army convention, was guest of honor at a cocktail party last night given by Gen. and Mrs. von Tempelhoff at the Westchester Star Staff. Photo by Rosemary.

AUG 12 1960